Aims of the Journal: Productive Discourse (ProD) is an international, not for profit, blind peer-reviewed journal of critical readings across disciplines. It aims to provide teachers, students and learned members of the community an authentic open-access platform featuring scholarly research, reviews and perspectives on the state of current discourse on topics of interdisciplinary interest. The annual journal is published both in print and electronic forms once a year on the 3rd of the month of Jestha in the Nepali calendar.

Mission: The journal will strive to create a platform where scholars, experts and thinkers exchange informed, critical and respectful discourses on important topics to advance human, social and political sciences for the larger good of the people.

Vision: The vision of the journal is to become the leading international platform for multi-disciplinary research and writing, known for its high standards, innovative approach, and impact on the learned community.

Methodology: The journal uses a rigorous peer-review process, led by a team of experts from Nepal and abroad, to ensure high quality and impact of published research and writing in pursuit of productive and practicable discourse. Articles are subject to initial editor screening followed by a blind peer review before publication. Submissions are invariably checked for plagiarism. Manuscripts must be between 5 and 20 pages, in APA formats, that is between (3000 and 8000 words), excluding references.

Peer Review Process: Research and review articles received from open call and individual invitation are peer-reviewed, double-blind, before publication. The Managing Editor sends original research and review articles to Section Editors for initial review of the work's relevance to the journal. They submit draft decisions to the Editor-in-Chief for final decision about further review or acceptance. The initial review process will be short, and not last longer than six weeks. Perspectives, including case studies and interviews, are reviewed by Section Editors and cleared with the Editor-in-Chief. These are not subject to double blind peer review.
